OVERVIEW

Mike is a founding partner of Clark & Gotzler, Attorneys at Law, a firm devoted exclusively to representing and advising employers on all employment-related matters. Mike has been providing legal and practical human resources advice to a wide range of employers for nearly 20 years, including 10 years as General Counsel of an HR firm that provided temporary staffing, executive recruiting, HR consulting and integrated HR services throughout the U.S.

While serving as an attorney at one of the nation's leading labor and employment law firms (Seyfarth Shaw) and later at the world's largest law firm (Baker & McKenzie), he represented clients in a wide range of employment matters, including litigation before courts and administrative agencies. His practice includes employment litigation, ADA/FMLA leave and accommodation issues, wage & hour compliance, non-compete agreements, independent contractor issues, labor relations and NLRB proceedings and preventive HR audits and training. To help his clients minimize claims, he has designed and delivered a wide range of HR training courses, including anti-harassment courses designed with EEOC involvement and approval.

During his career, Mike has partnered with and provided legal counsel to employers of all sizes and industries throughout the U.S., from multi-national Fortune 50 companies to start-up companies looking to hire their first employee.

Mike has developed particular expertise in understanding the many employer impacts of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) including creating employer "Pay or Play" options and minimizing or eliminating penalty exposure. He has presented at national conferences, represented business at White House briefings, participated on expert panels and been regularly interviewed and quoted as a result. Mike is also licensed as a broker for health, life and disability insurance.

EXPERIENCE

Mike has guided his client employers to successful dismissal of dozens of claims before various courts and administrative enforcement agencies.

Mike has advised employers on a wide range of employment issues including employee leaves of absence, independent contractor status, reasonable accommodation requests, FLSA and other wage & hour compliance, and employment policies and procedures.

Mike was one of the first individuals selected to deliver sexual harassment training as part of the 1999 conciliation agreement in EEOC v. Ford Motor Co., under which Ford was required to provide EEOC-approved sexual harassment training to its more than 100,000 employees in the U.S. Mike also then trained and certified other facilitators.

Mike played a key role in passage of the Wisconsin laws that regulate PEOs (professional employer organizations) and was recognized by the industry for his efforts. He has also advocated on behalf of the staffing industry on a wide range of legislative and regulatory matters.

Mike has represented employers in NLRB proceedings, collective bargaining negotiations, grievance and arbitration proceedings, organizing campaigns and a wide range of labor disputes.
